Ronkonkoma, New York - Lab Crafters rounds out its regional coverage in the United States with the additional of James McDowall as their Regional Sales Manager that will be focusing on key accounts in the West. Taking on the task of expanding Lab Crafters' presence on the west coast, he will report into Scott Hegemann, VP of Sales.

"James brings a deep passion for helping clients create lab environments that are built for the future, he has a deep understanding of how flexible, adaptable and mobile solutions improve the performance of laboratories for the scientists and students who are in the space" said Scott Hegemann. "I am very excited to be able to support customers, lab planners and contractors with a Lab Crafters employee on the west coast. We look forward to supporting customers and partners with our differentiated products and process and growing on our strong heritage of making labs work for customers."

James McDowall remarked, "The life sciences research hubs up and down the west coast are among the fastest developing globally, I am excited to help bring the Lab Crafters legacy of product innovation and precision to these laboratories."

McDowall has extensive experience in the laboratory solutions space working for some of the top names in the industry. His most recent being a Regional Manager in the Pacific Northwest for Hanson Lab Solutions where he worked directly with clients, general contractors, architects, and lab planners in developing collaborative relationships by finding the right solutions for their needs. James is a graduate of the University of Washington.
